CAL PERFORMANCES PRESENTS THE
VIENNA PHILHARMONIC
IN THREE CONCERTS CONDUCTED BY SEMYON BYCHKOV
FRIDAY–SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 25–27, AT ZELLERBACH HALL

The inaugural Orchestral Residency includes works by Schubert, Wagner, Bartók, Brahms and Mahler

Sightlines: Special one-hour talk by the orchestra’s chairman Clemens Hellsberg, on Friday, February 25, plus pre-performance talks with the artists on Saturday & Sunday, February 26 & 27

BERKELEY, January 18, 2011—Cal Performances is pleased to present the legendary Vienna Philharmonic with conductor Semyon Bychkov in an historic three-performance concert residency at Zellerbach Hall on Friday, February 25 at 8:00 p.m., Saturday, February 26, at 8:00 p.m., and Sunday, February 27, at 3:00 p.m. This is the first time since 1987 that the ensemble has performed in the Bay Area. On February 25, Maestro Bychkov will lead the orchestra in Franz Schubert’s Symphony No. 2 in B-flat major, D. 125, on a program with the Prelude & Liebestod from Richard Wagner’s Tristan und Isolde and the Suite from Béla Bartók’s The Miraculous Mandarin. The following evening, the orchestra returns with Robert Schumann’s Symphony No. 2 in C major, Op. 61, and Johannes Brahms’s Symphony No. 2 in D major, Op. 73, a work that was premiered by the Vienna Philharmonic in 1877. The final concert features Gustav Mahler’s Symphony No. 6 in A minor (“Tragic”). In his recent appearance as guest conductor of the San Francisco Symphony, Bychkov was applauded for mixing “raw energy with finesse, yielding potent and often eloquent readings of the orchestral repertoire” (San Francisco Chronicle).

This engagement marks the inauguration of a new annual program of orchestral residencies at Cal Performances. “With my experience at the Chicago Symphony and the New York Philharmonic, I have lived firsthand the fundamental positive role orchestras play in our society,” said Cal Performances Director Matías Tarnopolsky. “It is my hope that we can regularly bring the world’s leading orchestras to Berkeley with the idea that our experience will include not only their musicianship in the concert hall, but their interaction with young musicians and audiences here. To begin the Cal Performances’ Orchestra Residency with the Vienna Philharmonic is a dream come true.”

A special one-hour Sightlines pre-performance talk will be given by the orchestra’s chairman Clemens Hellsberg on Friday, February 25 at 6:30 p.m. at Zellerbach Hall. There will also be two 30-minute pre-performance talks with the artists on Saturday, February 26 at 7:00 p.m. and Sunday, February 27 at 2:00 p.m. at Zellerbach Hall.

Cal Performances, in conjunction with UC Berkeley Department of Music, is planning a full array of educational events for University students. Orchestra members will work directly with Department of Music students, including leading section instrumental sectionals for student musicians of the University Symphony Orchestra. Students will be able to attend a dress rehearsal of the Vienna Philharmonic and there will be a chamber music concert for a select student audience.

VIENNA PHILHARMONIC

Considered one of the finest orchestras in the world, the Vienna Philharmonic has a rich 160-year musical history that can be traced back to 1842, when Otto Nicolai formed the Philharmonische Academie. The Academie was grounded in a revolutionary policy—one of democratic self-determination and entrepreneurial initiative undertaken by an orchestra as a partnership—which still continues today.

When Otto Nicolai left Vienna permanently in 1847, the young enterprise almost collapsed, having lost in one person both its artistic and administrative leader. A dozen years of stagnation followed before a new innovation brought about the long-awaited change of fortune. In 1860, Carl Eckert became conductor and gave a series of four subscription concerts and since then the orchestra has given concerts continuously.

The orchestra subsequently performed under the leadership of Otto Dessoff, and during his time the repertoire was consistently enlarged, important organizational principles (music archives, rules of procedure) introduced and the orchestra moved to its third home, the Goldener Saal in the Musikverein building in Vienna. The location, at which it still performs today, has proved to be the ideal venue with its acoustical characteristics influencing the orchestra's style and sound. In 1875, Hans Richter became conductor, and the Vienna Philharmonic firmly established itself as an ensemble of world renown and unique tradition. This was helped through its associations with Wagner, Verdi, Bruckner, Brahms, Liszt and others, all of whom performed with the orchestra, either as conductors or soloists. During Richter’s tenure, which has become known as the Golden Age, Brahms's Second and Third, as well as Bruckner’s Eighth Symphony were premiered.

The Vienna Philharmonic performed abroad for the first time at the World Exhibition in Paris in 1900 with Gustav Mahler conducting. The orchestra, officially recognized by the Austrian government as an association in 1908, did not start touring with any regularity until 1922 when Felix von Weingartner led the orchestra to distant lands such as South America.

The orchestra’s importance is best illustrated by the statements of countless pre-eminent musical personalities of the past. Richard Wagner described the orchestra as being one of the most outstanding in the world; Anton Bruckner called it “the most superior musical association”; Johannes Brahms counted himself as a “friend and admirer”; Gustav Mahler claimed to be joined together through “the bonds of musical art”; and Richard Strauss summarized these sentiments by saying: “All praise of the Vienna Philharmonic reveals itself as understatement.”

The Vienna Philharmonic has made it its mission to communicate the humanitarian message of music into the daily lives and consciousness of its listeners. In 2005, the Vienna Philharmonic was named Goodwill Ambassador of the World Health Organization. The musicians endeavor to implement the motto with which Beethoven, whose symphonic works served as a catalyst for the creation of the orchestra, prefaced his Missa Solemnis: “From the heart, to the heart.”
SEMYON BYCHKOV

Semyon Bychkov was born in Leningrad (now St. Petersburg) in 1952 and studied at the Glinka Choir School for ten years. Later, he studied at the Leningrad Conservatory with Ilya Musin, a legendary conducting teacher whom he considers to be one of the most significant influences in his life. Bychkov’s studies with Musin enhanced his own innate musicality, leading to his winning the 1973 Rachmaninoff Conducting Competition. Two years later, at 22, he immigrated to the United States. Once Bychkov was settled, his career took off rapidly. After becoming conductor of the Mannes College Orchestra in New York, he received an invitation to conduct the closing concert at the Spoleto USA Festival. Two weeks later, he was asked to conduct Il trovatore at ArtPark, with the Buffalo Philharmonic. The concert marked the start of a ten year relationship; first as associate conductor, then as principal guest conductor, then in 1985 as music director, succeeding Julius Rudel.

In 1989, Bychkov was invited to become music director of the Orchestre de Paris, which he led from 1989 to 1998. By the mid-1980s, he had already established contacts with many important European orchestras and opera houses, and had begun recording for Philips (initially with the Berlin Philharmonic). In 1997, Bychkov became chief conductor of WDR Symphony Orchestra Cologne, a post from which he recently retired. At the time Semyon Bychkov became chief conductor in Cologne, he was appointed chief conductor of the Dresden Semperoper, a post he held until 2002.

Semyon Bychkov has enjoyed many long-term relationships with the world’s most renowned opera houses, including the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, the Metropolitan Opera House, La Scala, Maggio Musicale Fiorentino, Semperoper and Palais Garnier (Paris) and has had conspicuous success with the world’s most demanding opera audiences at the Vienna State Opera. In addition to his permanent posts in America and Europe, Bychkov has enjoyed fruitful and fulfilling relationships with many of the world’s great orchestras, including the Berlin, Vienna and New York Philharmonics and the Chicago Symphony.

He has come to the Bay Area numerous times to conduct the San Francisco Symphony. About a 2009 concert with the San Francisco Symphony, San Francisco Chronicle wrote:
“Bychkov gives a little hand gesture here, a little nod there, and the orchestra responds with an exquisite blend of rich sonority and rhythmic nuance…I’ve never heard it played so beautifully.”
