George Frideric Handel (1685–1759)
Messiah, hwv 56 (1741)

Primo le parole, poi la musica: first the words, then the music. Ask a roomful of people to identify the composer of Messiah, and a roomful of hands will go up. Ask that same gathering to name the librettist, and puzzled silience is likely to follow. To be sure, Messiah is not a setting of a freshly written, original book; the text is a compilation of passages from the Old and New Testaments. But that makes it no less impressive an achievement. The work of a perceptive and passionate writer, Messiah’s libretto is just as noteworthy in its own way as George Frideric Handel’s immortal music. So before that music, a look at those fine words—and their curator—is very much in order.

Charles Jennens’s palatial home at Gopsall, North West Leicestershire—near Bosworth Field, where the War of the Roses was conclusively ended—was demolished in 1951 after years of neglect and abuse. Much the same can be said about Jennens himself: glamorous in his day, his star faded rapidly and commentarial wrecking balls gutted his posthumous reputation. “Suleyman the Magnificent,” japed 18th-century Shakespeare scholar George Steevens. “A vain fool crazed by his wealth,” sniped Samuel Johnson.

Prickly, prissy, snippy, snooty, and waspish, Jennens was manifestly not a man of the people. But charges that he was an intellectual featherweight are unfounded. The sharpest barbs are products of Steevens’s malicious envy of Jennens’s classy Shakespeare editions and, as such, deserve permanent retirement. Christopher Hogwood duly notes Jennens’s “self-importance and intolerance, the high-handed manner of a wealthy country gentleman, opinionated and cruel in his criticism, whose ostentation made many of his contemporaries enemies.” But, he also points out Jennens’s many accomplishments, his educated taste, his passionate dedication to Handel’s music, his well-designed libretti, and his often splendid editorial advice—such as restoring an excised “Alleluia” to the Part I finale of Saul.

These letters reveal that Messiah is a child of the Enlightenment, that revolutionary mindset that promoted reason over unexamined belief, but Charles Jennens was no Edward Gibbon, Thomas Paine or Thomas Jefferson proclaiming a humanistic philosophy based on rational inquiry. Instead, he sought to defend his deeply felt and conservative Anglican Christianity against what he saw as intellectual attacks on the core of the Christian message. In July 1741, Jennens wrote to his friend Edward Holdsworth:

Handel says he will do nothing next Winter, but I hope I shall persuade him to set another Scripture Collection I have made for him, & perform it for his own Benefit in Passion Week. I hope he will lay out his whole Genius & Skill upon it, that the Composition may excell all his former Compositions, as the Subject excells every other Subject. The Subject is Messiah.

Jennens did indeed manage to “persuade” his eminent friend and colleague, but victory was tempered with disappointment, as we hear in another letter to Holdsworth, from December 1741:

I heard with great pleasure at my arrival in Town, that Handel had set the Oratorio of Messiah; but it was some mortification to me to hear that instead of performing it here he was gone to Ireland with it. However, I hope we shall hear it when he comes back.

These letters reveal that Messiah represents a departure from Handel’s customary active and collaborative relationship with his librettists, including Jennens in previous projects such as Saul, L’Allegro, and (probably) Israel in Egypt. Handel apparently set the completed Messiah libretto as handed to him, without the usual rounds of editorial negotiations. That speaks well of Jennens’s literary skill, for his elegantly structured libretto deserves a full share of the credit for Messiah’s perennial popularity. Jennens based his scriptural selections on both theological and musical considerations—Messiah is first and foremost an oratorio libretto, not a religious tract. Consider the very first section, drawn from the first five verses of Isaiah 40, which Jennens structured as recitative-aria-chorus, a formula that will repeat itself—sometimes with significant expansion—throughout the entire oratorio.

Now it was Handel’s turn to clothe Jennens’s masterful compilation with compelling and entertaining music. He was more than up to the task. By 1741, George Frideric Handel was an English institution, resident for 30 years, citizen for the past 14 years, a robust (if not always altogether healthy) man in his mid-fifties. As a self-employed freelance musician, responsible to the dictates of the public rather than the directives of courtly or clerical patrons, he had seen his full share of triumph and failure, boom and bust, hits and flops. As recently as 1737, he had suffered a sickening financial loss from the collapse of an opera season in which he was a partner, followed by a “palsy (probably a stroke) that left him temporarily without the use of his right hand. Showing his customary powers of recuperation, he not only regained his health but also his financial footing. Nothing seemed to keep him down for long; Handel was tough, resilient, and supremely confident in his ability to produce music that met public approval.

He had good reason for that confidence. As far back as 1710, his first London visit had resulted in the blockbuster hit Rinaldo, and, for decades, he had produced a steady stream of Italian operas in addition to a sizeable catalog of instrumental music. His nontheatrical enterprises kept him afloat during the 1730s as the Italian opera craze subsided, leaving Handel to provide him with the next stage in his career. As the 1730s progressed, Handel was no newcomer to the genre: as far back as the 1720s, he had produced a steady stream of Italian operas in addition to a sizeable catalog of instrumental music. His nontheatrical enterprises kept him afloat during the 1730s as the Italian opera craze subsided, leaving Handel to provide him with the next stage in his career.

Thus the Dublin Journal, snatching the honors of posting the very first of uncountable Messiah reviews, on April 17, 1742. Another less formal appraisal came from the Reverend Dr. Delaney, so taken with Mrs. Cibber’s performance of “He was despised” that he exclaimed, “Woman, for this, be all thy sins forgiven!” Dublin heard Messiah twice more, in May and June; Handel departed for London on August 17, determined to recapture the affection of a London public that had cooled towards him in recent years.

By 1741, George Frideric Handel was an English institution, resident for 30 years, citizen for the past 14 years, a robust (if not always altogether healthy) man in his mid-fifties. He was more than up to the task. By 1741, George Frideric Handel was an English institution, resident for 30 years, citizen for the past 14 years, a robust (if not always altogether healthy) man in his mid-fifties. As a self-employed freelance musician, responsible to the dictates of the public rather than the directives of courtly or clerical patrons, he had seen his full share of triumph and failure, boom and bust, hits and flops. As recently as 1737, he had suffered a sickening financial loss from the collapse of an opera season in which he was a partner, followed by a “palsy (probably a stroke) that left him temporarily without the use of his right hand. Showing his customary powers of recuperation, he not only regained his health but also his financial footing. Nothing seemed to keep him down for long; Handel was tough, resilient, and supremely confident in his ability to produce music that met public approval.

He had good reason for that confidence. As far back as 1710, his first London visit had resulted in the blockbuster hit Rinaldo, and, for decades, he had produced a steady stream of Italian operas in addition to a sizeable catalog of instrumental music. His nontheatrical enterprises kept him afloat during the 1730s as the Italian opera craze subsided, leaving Handel to provide him with the next stage in his career. As the 1730s progressed, Handel was no newcomer to the genre: as far back as the 1720s, he had produced a steady stream of Italian operas in addition to a sizeable catalog of instrumental music. His nontheatrical enterprises kept him afloat during the 1730s as the Italian opera craze subsided, leaving Handel to provide him with the next stage in his career.

Thus the Dublin Journal, snatching the honors of posting the very first of uncountable Messiah reviews, on April 17, 1742. Another less formal appraisal came from the Reverend Dr. Delaney, so taken with Mrs. Cibber’s performance of “He was despised” that he exclaimed, “Woman, for this, be all thy sins forgiven!” Dublin heard Messiah twice more, in May and June; Handel departed for London on August 17, determined to recapture the affection of a London public that had cooled towards him in recent years.

Handel returned to a London that was riding a wave of religious piety, thanks to the energies of John and Charles Wesley, Anglican revivalists whose influence ran towards the puritanical, in particular regarding that perennial scapegoat of evangelical reformers, the popular theater. Handel, ever sensitive to the overall public temper, decided to hold off from introducing Messiah and chose instead to re-establish his London presence with the new Samson, given six performances starting on February 18, 1743. Despite a few brickbats tossed by an unamused Horace Walpole on Handel’s preference for English soloists over Italian opera singers (“he has hired all the goddesses from farces and the singers of Roast Beef from between the acts at both theaters”), the Samson performances were warmly received. Thus emboldened, Handel scheduled another series of six oratorio concerts featuring the same company; they would begin on March 16 with a repeat of Samson followed by a revival of L’Allegro on the 18th, with Messiah set for its London première on Wednesday, March 23. In a fit of uncertainty about potential backlash from Anglican right-wingers, Handel chose to advertise it only as “A New Sacred Oratorio,” rather than referring to it by name. But the oratorio’s identity and subject matter were known about town nonetheless, and the same day (March 19) as Handel’s advertisement appeared, the Universal Spectator published a letter signed with the pseudonym “Philalethes”—i.e., lover of truth.

But it seems the Old Testament is not to be prophane’d alone, nor God by the Name of Jehovah only, but the New must be join’d with it, and God by the most sacred the most merciful name of Messiah; for I’m inform’d than an Oratorio call’d by that Name has already been perform’d in Ireland, and is soon to be perform’d here: What the Piece itself is, I know not, and therefore shall say nothing about it; but I must again ask, If the Place and Performers are fit?

The tone is respectful but the message is clear enough: the objection was not so much to the oratorio, but rather to the blending of theater with religion, an issue that was to dog London’s reception of Messiah for years to come. Whether the London première was even successful or not remains a bit uncertain, although the Earl of Shaftesbury states firmly that Messiah “was but indifferently relish’d.”

Subsequent outings were few and far between during the 1740s. Then fortune suddenly smiled on Handel’s undervalued oratorio. Handel arranged a performance of the complete Messiah for May 1, 1750, at London’s Foundling Hospital, as a dedication for the new organist.
he had donated. The association with charity proved to be the oratorio’s turning point, as sellout crowds cheered. Handel would produce Messiah at both Covent Garden and the Foundling Hospital on a yearly basis for the rest of his life; he died on April 14, 1759, in the interval between the April and May concerts. By then, Messiah had become a cherished fixture of the Easter season; only during the 19th century did it become traditional Christmas fare.

There can be no single, absolutely authoritative version of Messiah. Handel was quick to revise, rewrite, and rework as necessary to meet the needs of a particular performer or venue, and, from 1742 through the early 1750s, the oratorio underwent numerous and often significant changes. Although the Messiah revisions are convoluted and confusing, a standardized Messiah has evolved that generally conforms to the score as Handel performed it in the 1750s. But the variants offer abundant opportunity for exploration, such as a recent recording that reproduces the 1742 Dublin original.

So, finally, the question: Why Messiah? Why wasn’t Bach’s Christmas Oratorio adopted for sing-it-yourself festivals, or the St. Matthew Passion at Eastertime? Those pieces are revered and respected—but it is Messiah that has joined the Verdi Requiem—Messiah stands apart as having at least one foot in homey, popular theater. Messiah does not call upon us to repent, to anguish or to ponder; its raison d’être is to offer reassurance. It was created to provide pleasure and entertainment, and if it managed to tuck a bit of spiritual renewal into the mix, so much the better. The theatricality that caused so much consternation in the 1740s has proven to be Messiah’s greatest strength in the long run. There’s something fundamentally friendly about it, something instinctively lovable and approachable. So it thrives—in churches, community centers, concert halls, and high-school gymnasiums; on records, on the radio, in movies, on TV, even on YouTube. Eighteenth-century historian Charles Burney recounts an incident at the Dublin première, in which orchestra leader Matthew Dubourg became hopelessly lost during a solo in one of the arias. Somehow he stumbled back to the proper key, at which point Handel bellowed out lustily: “You are welcome home, Mr. Dubourg!”

You are welcome home. That’s the key to Messiah—beloved, reassuring, and familiar, it offers living proof that great art is for all people, in all times and in all places. The Roubillac statue on Handel’s tomb in Westminster Abbey shows him holding the score to Messiah. He needs no other epitaph.

Scott Fogelsong
Chair, Department of Musicianship and Music Theory, San Francisco Conservatory of Music

George Frideric Handel (1685–1759)
Messiah, HWV 56 (1741)

AND WITHOUT CONTROVERSY, great is the Mystery of Godliness: God was manifested in the flesh, justified by the Spirit, seen of Angels, preached among the Gentiles, believed on in the World, received up in Glory. In whom are hid all the Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge.

PART ONE

SYMPHONY

ACCOMPAGNATO (TENOR)
Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplish’d, that her iniquity is pardon’d. The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness: Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God.

Isaiah 40, vv. 1–3

AIR (TENOR)
Ev’ry valley shall be exalted, and ev’ry mountain and hill made low: the crooked straight, and the rough places plain.

Isaiah 40, v. 4

CHORUS
And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed. And all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

Isaiah 40, v. 5

ACCOMPAGNATO (BASS)
Thus saith the Lord of hosts: Yet once, a little while, and I will shake the heav’n’s and the earth, the sea and the dry land; And I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come.

Haggai 2, vv. 6–7

The Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, ev’n the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in, behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts.

Malachi 3, v. 1

AIR (ALTO)
But who may abide the day of his coming? And who shall stand when he appeareth? For he is like a refiner’s fire.

Malachi 3, v. 2

CHORUS
And he shall purify the sons of Levi, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness.

Malachi 3, v. 3

RECYTATIVE (ALTO)
Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Emmanuel, “God with us.”

Isaiah 7, v. 14; Matthew 1, v. 23

AIR (ALTO) & CHORUS
O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion, get thee up into the high mountain; O thou that tellest good tidings to Jerusalem, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah: Behold your God! O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion, arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee.

Isaiah 40, v. 9; 60, v. 1
ACCOMPAGNATO (BASS)
For, behold, darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee. And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising.
Isaiah 60, vv. 2–3

AIR (BASS)
The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light. And they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined.
Isaiah 9, v. 2

CHORUS
For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder, and his name shall be called: Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.
Isaiah 9, v. 6

PIFA (PASTORAL SYMPHONY)

RECITATIVE & ACCOMPAGNATO (SOPRANO)
There were shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.
Luke 2, vv. 8–9

RECITATIVE (SOPRANO)
And the angel said unto them: Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.
Luke 2, vv. 10–11

ACCOMPAGNATO (SOPRANO)
And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heav’nly host, praising God, and saying:
Luke 2, v. 13

CHORUS
Glory to God in the highest, and peace on earth, goodwill toward men.
Luke 2, v. 14

AIR (SOPRANO)
Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion, shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee. He is the righteous Saviour, and he shall speak peace unto the heathen.
Zechariah 9, vv. 9–10

RECITATIVE (ALTO)
Then shall the eyes of the blind be open’d, and the ears of the deaf unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as a hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing.
Isaiah 35, vv. 5–6

AIR (ALTO & SOPRANO)
He shall feed his flock like a shepherd, and he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and gently lead those that are with young.
Isaiah 40, v. 11

AIR (ALTO)
He was despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.
Isaiah 53, v. 3
He gave his back to the smiters, and his cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: he hid not his face from shame and spitting.
Isaiah 50, v. 6

CHORUS
Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows: he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him.
Isaiah 53, vv. 4–5

And with his stripes we are healed.
Isaiah 53, v. 5

All we like sheep have gone astray, we have turned ev’ry one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.
Isaiah 53, v. 6

ACCOMPAGNATO (TENOR)
All they that see him laugh him to scorn: they shoot out their lips, and shake their heads, saying:
Psalm 22, v. 7

CHORUS
He trusted in God that he would deliver him: let him deliver him, if he delight in him.
Psalm 22, v. 8

ACCOMPAGNATO (TENOR)
Thy rebuke hath broken his heart; he is full of heaviness. He looked for some to have pity on him, but there was no man, neither found he any to comfort him.
Psalm 69, v. 21

ARIOSO (TENOR)
Behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto his sorrow.
Lamentations 1, v. 12

ACCOMPAGNATO (SOPRANO)
He was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of thy people was he stricken.
Isaiah 53, v. 8

AIR (SOPRANO)
But thou didst not leave his soul in hell; nor didst thou suffer thy Holy One to see corruption.
Psalm 16, v. 10

PART TWO

CHORUS
His yoke is easy, his burthen is light.
Matthew 11, v. 30

CHORUS
Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world.
John 1, v. 29

AIR (ALTO)

ACCOMPAGNATO (SOPRANO)

ACCOMPAGNATO (TENOR)
He was despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.
Isaiah 53, v. 3
He gave his back to the smiters, and his cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: he hid not his face from shame and spitting.
Isaiah 50, v. 6

CHORUS
Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows: he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him.
Isaiah 53, vv. 4–5

And with his stripes we are healed.
Isaiah 53, v. 5

All we like sheep have gone astray, we have turned ev’ry one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.
Isaiah 53, v. 6

ACCOMPAGNATO (TENOR)
All they that see him laugh him to scorn: they shoot out their lips, and shake their heads, saying:
Psalm 22, v. 7

CHORUS
He trusted in God that he would deliver him: let him deliver him, if he delight in him.
Psalm 22, v. 8

ACCOMPAGNATO (TENOR)
Thy rebuke hath broken his heart; he is full of heaviness. He looked for some to have pity on him, but there was no man, neither found he any to comfort him.
Psalm 69, v. 21

ARIOSO (TENOR)
Behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto his sorrow.
Lamentations 1, v. 12

ACCOMPAGNATO (SOPRANO)
He was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of thy people was he stricken.
Isaiah 53, v. 8

AIR (SOPRANO)
But thou didst not leave his soul in hell; nor didst thou suffer thy Holy One to see corruption.
Psalm 16, v. 10
CHORUS
Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in! Who is this King of glory? The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle. Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in! Who is this King of glory? The Lord of hosts, he is the King of glory.
Psalm 24, vv. 7–10

RECITATIVE (TENOR)
Unto which of the angels said he at any time: Thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee?
Hebrews 1, v. 5

CHORUS
Let all the angels of God worship him.
Hebrews 1, v. 6

AIR (ALTO)
Thou art gone up on high, thou hast led captivity captive, and received gifts for men: yea, even for thine enemies, that the Lord God might dwell among them.
Psalm 68, v. 18

CHORUS
The Lord gave the word: great was the company of the preachers.
Psalm 68, v. 11

AIR (SOPRANO)
How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!
Romans 10, v. 15

CHORUS
Their sound is gone out into all lands, and their words unto the ends of the world.
Romans 10, v. 18

AIR (BASS)
Why do the nations so furiously rage together, and why do the people imagine a vain thing? The kings of the earth rise up, and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord and against his anointed.
Psalm 2, v. 1–2

CHORUS
Let us break their bonds asunder, and cast away their yokes from us.
Psalm 2, v. 3

RECITATIVE (TENOR)
He that dwelleth in heaven shall laugh them to scorn: the Lord shall have them in derision.
Psalm 2, v. 4

AIR (TENOR)
Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter’s vessel.
Psalm 2, v. 9

CHORUS
Hallelujah, for the Lord God omnipoteth, Hallelujah. The kingdom of this world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever, Hallelujah! King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, and he shall reign for ever and ever, Hallelujah!
Revelations 19, v. 6; 11; v. 15; 19, v. 16

PART THREE

AIR (SOPRANO)
I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God.
Job 19, vv. 25–26
For now is Christ risen from the dead, the first fruits of them that sleep.
1 Corinthians 15, v. 20

CHORUS
Since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.
1 Corinthians 15, vv. 21–22

RECITATIVE (BASS)
Behold, I tell you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be chang’d, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet.
1 Corinthians 15, vv. 51–52

AIR (BASS)
The trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.
1 Corinthians 15, vv. 52–53

RECITATIVE (ALTO)
Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written: Death is swallow’d up in victory.
1 Corinthians 15, v. 54

DUET (ALTO & TENOR)
O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law.
1 Corinthians 15, vv. 55–56

CHORUS
But thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.
1 Corinthians 15, v. 57

AIR (SOPRANO)
If God be for us, who can be against us? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God’s elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is at the right hand of God, who makes intercession for us.
Romans 8, vv. 31, 33–34

CHORUS
Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, and hath redeemed us to God by His blood, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing. Blessing and honour, glory and pow’r be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever and ever. Amen.
Revelations 5, vv. 12–14

Libretto by Charles Jennens (1700–1773), from biblical text.
Philharmonia Baroque’s musicians perform on historically accurate instruments. Below each player’s name is information about his or her instrument’s maker and origin.

Violin
- Lisa Weiss*: Johann Georg Thir, Vienna, 1754
  - Egon & Joan von Katschnitz Concertmaster Chair
- Maria Ionia Caswell
  - Antoni Rief, Vils, Tyrol, 1725
- Jolianne von Einem
  - Rowland Rusi, Guildford, England, 1979; after Antonio Stradivari, Cremona
- Lisa Grodin
  - Paulo Antonio Testore, Contrada, Larga di Milano, 1736
- Katherine Kyme
  - Carlo Antonio Testore, Milan, 1720
- Tyler Lewis
  - Timothy Johnson, Hewitt, Texas, 2009; after Antonio Stradivari
- Anthony Martin
  - Thomas Oliver Croen, Walnut Creek, California, 2005; after F. Gobetti, Venice, 1717
- Carla Moore
  - Johann Georg Thir, Vienna, 1754
- Maxine Nemerovski
  - Timothy Johnson, Bloomington, Indiana, 1999; after Antonio Stradivari, Cremona
- Laurie Young Stevens
  - Anonymous, Paris, France, c. 1720
- Gabrielle Wunsch
  - Lorenzo Carcassi, Florence, Italy, 1765

Viola
- Ellie Nishi*: Anonymous, Germany, 18th century
- David Daniel Bowes
  - Richard Duke, London, c. 1780
- Aaron Westman
  - Dmitry Badarau, Brussels, 2003

Violoncello
- Tanya Tomkins*: Joseph Panormo, London, 1811
- Phoebe Carrai
  - Anonymous, Italy, c. 1690
  - Osher Cello Chair Endowment
- Paul Hale
  - Joseph Grubaugh & Sigrun Seifert, Petaluma, 1988; after Antonio Stradivari, Cremona
  - Zheng Cao Memorial Cello Chair

Bass
- Kristin Zoernig*: Joseph Wrent, Rotterdam, Holland, 1848

Oboe
- Marc Schachman*
  - Sand Dalmon, Lopez Island, 1993; after Floth, c. 1800
  - In Memory of Clare Frieman Kivelson & Irene Valente Angstadt Chair

Bassoon
- Danny Bond*
  - Peter de Koningh, Hall, Holland, 1978; after Prudent, Paris, c. 1760
- Marilyn Boenau
  - Paul Halperin, Zell i.W., Germany, 2002; after Deper

---

Philharmonia Chorale

PBO Community Fund for Choral Music

Bruce Lamott, Director

Robert & Laura Cory Chorale Director Chair

---

Soprano
- Angela Arnold
- Jennifer Ashworth
- Claire Kelm
- Barbara Rowland
- Helene Zindarsian
- Angelique Zuluaga

Alto
- Laurel Cameron
- Elliot Franks
- Linda Liebschutz
- Heidi Waterman
- Jacque Wilson

Tenor
- Jeffrey Barnett
- Thomas Busse
- Kevin Gibbs
- Daniel Harper
- Corey Head
- Jimmy kansau

Bass
- John Bischoff
- Paul Boyce
- Randall Bunnell
- James Monios
- Jess Perry
- Chad Runyon

---

Touring Staff

- Michael Costa, Executive Director
- David Daniel Bowes, Music Librarian
- E. J. Chavez, Stage Equipment Coordinator
- Adam Cockerham, Education & Production Coordinator
- Alexander Kort, Stage Manager
- Jeffrey Phillips, Artistic Administrator
- Thomas Winter, Keyboard Technician
The San Francisco’s Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra has been dedicated to historically informed performance of Baroque, Classical, and early Romantic music on original instruments since its inception in 1981. Under Music Director Nicholas McGegan, Philharmonia was named Ensemble of the Year by Musical America in 2004. The Orchestra performs an annual subscription series in the San Francisco Bay Area and regularly tours the United States and abroad. Among the most-recorded period-instrument orchestras in the world, Philharmonia has made 34 recordings for Harmonia Mundi, its Gramophone Award-winning recording of Handel’s Messiah with Musica Sacra/Kent Tritle and his Kennedy Center Debut with the National Symphony conducted by Matthew Halls. Mr. Carter is in demand as a guest lecturer on countertenor technique and repertory, frequently offering interactive lecture-recitals and master classes. He received a Master of Music degree from Yale School of Music and Institute of Sacred Music, where he studied with James Taylor, Simon Carrington, and Judith Malafonte. He received his undergraduate degree from William Jewell College, where he studied voice with Arnold Epley. Mr. Carter was a 2008 regional finalist in the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions. He lives in Liberty, Missouri, with his wife and two children, and serves as artist-in-residence at William Jewell College.

As he embarks on his fourth decade on the podium, Nicholas McGegan, hailed as “one of the finest Baroque conductors of his generation” (The Independent, London), is increasingly recognized for his probing and revelatory explorations of music of all periods. He has been music director of Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra for 27 years, and was Artistic Director of the International Handel Festival Göttingen for 20 years (1991–2011). Beginning in the 2013–2014 season he becomes Principal Guest Conductor of the Pasadena Symphony, and in 2014 becomes Artistic Director of Musica Sacra/Kent Tritle and his Kennedy Center Debut with the National Symphony conducted by Matthew Halls. Mr. Carter is in demand as a guest lecturer on countertenor technique and repertory, frequently offering interactive lecture-recitals and master classes. He received a Master of Music degree from Yale School of Music and Institute of Sacred Music, where he studied with James Taylor, Simon Carrington, and Judith Malafonte. He received his undergraduate degree from William Jewell College, where he studied voice with Arnold Epley. Mr. Carter was a 2008 regional finalist in the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions. He lives in Liberty, Missouri, with his wife and two children, and serves as artist-in-residence at William Jewell College.

Nicholas McGegan, hailed as “one of the finest Baroque conductors of his generation” (The Independent, London), is increasingly recognized for his probing and revelatory explorations of music of all periods. He has been music director of Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra for 27 years, and was Artistic Director of the International Handel Festival Göttingen for 20 years (1991–2011). Beginning in the 2013–2014 season he becomes Principal Guest Conductor of the Pasadena Symphony, and in 2014 becomes Artistic Director of Musica Sacra/Kent Tritle and his Kennedy Center Debut with the National Symphony conducted by Matthew Halls. Mr. Carter is in demand as a guest lecturer on countertenor technique and repertory, frequently offering interactive lecture-recitals and master classes. He received a Master of Music degree from Yale School of Music and Institute of Sacred Music, where he studied with James Taylor, Simon Carrington, and Judith Malafonte. He received his undergraduate degree from William Jewell College, where he studied voice with Arnold Epley. Mr. Carter was a 2008 regional finalist in the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions. He lives in Liberty, Missouri, with his wife and two children, and serves as artist-in-residence at William Jewell College.

As he embarks on his fourth decade on the podium, Nicholas McGegan, hailed as “one of the finest Baroque conductors of his generation” (The Independent, London), is increasingly recognized for his probing and revelatory explorations of music of all periods. He has been music director of Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra for 27 years, and was Artistic Director of the International Handel Festival Göttingen for 20 years (1991–2011). Beginning in the 2013–2014 season he becomes Principal Guest Conductor of the Pasadena Symphony, and in 2014 becomes Artistic Director of Musica Sacra/Kent Tritle and his Kennedy Center Debut with the National Symphony conducted by Matthew Halls. Mr. Carter is in demand as a guest lecturer on countertenor technique and repertory, frequently offering interactive lecture-recitals and master classes. He received a Master of Music degree from Yale School of Music and Institute of Sacred Music, where he studied with James Taylor, Simon Carrington, and Judith Malafonte. He received his undergraduate degree from William Jewell College, where he studied voice with Arnold Epley. Mr. Carter was a 2008 regional finalist in the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions. He lives in Liberty, Missouri, with his wife and two children, and serves as artist-in-residence at William Jewell College.

As he embarks on his fourth decade on the podium, Nicholas McGegan, hailed as “one of the finest Baroque conductors of his generation” (The Independent, London), is increasingly recognized for his probing and revelatory explorations of music of all periods. He has been music director of Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra for 27 years, and was Artistic Director of the International Handel Festival Göttingen for 20 years (1991–2011). Beginning in the 2013–2014 season he becomes Principal Guest Conductor of the Pasadena Symphony, and in 2014 becomes Artistic Director of Musica Sacra/Kent Tritle and his Kennedy Center Debut with the National Symphony conducted by Matthew Halls. Mr. Carter is in demand as a guest lecturer on countertenor technique and repertory, frequently offering interactive lecture-recitals and master classes. He received a Master of Music degree from Yale School of Music and Institute of Sacred Music, where he studied with James Taylor, Simon Carrington, and Judith Malafonte. He received his undergraduate degree from William Jewell College, where he studied voice with Arnold Epley. Mr. Carter was a 2008 regional finalist in the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions. He lives in Liberty, Missouri, with his wife and two children, and serves as artist-in-residence at William Jewell College.

As he embarks on his fourth decade on the podium, Nicholas McGegan, hailed as “one of the finest Baroque conductors of his generation” (The Independent, London), is increasingly recognized for his probing and revelatory explorations of music of all periods. He has been music director of Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra for 27 years, and was Artistic Director of the International Handel Festival Göttingen for 20 years (1991–2011). Beginning in the 2013–2014 season he becomes Principal Guest Conductor of the Pasadena Symphony, and in 2014 becomes Artistic Director of Musica Sacra/Kent Tritle and his Kennedy Center Debut with the National Symphony conducted by Matthew Halls. Mr. Carter is in demand as a guest lecturer on countertenor technique and repertory, frequently offering interactive lecture-recitals and master classes. He received a Master of Music degree from Yale School of Music and Institute of Sacred Music, where he studied with James Taylor, Simon Carrington, and Judith Malafonte. He received his undergraduate degree from William Jewell College, where he studied voice with Arnold Epley. Mr. Carter was a 2008 regional finalist in the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions. He lives in Liberty, Missouri, with his wife and two children, and serves as artist-in-residence at William Jewell College.

As he embarks on his fourth decade on the podium, Nicholas McGegan, hailed as “one of the finest Baroque conductors of his generation” (The Independent, London), is increasingly recognized for his probing and revelatory explorations of music of all periods. He has been music director of Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra for 27 years, and was Artistic Director of the International Handel Festival Göttingen for 20 years (1991–2011). Beginning in the 2013–2014 season he becomes Principal Guest Conductor of the Pasadena Symphony, and in 2014 becomes Artistic Director of Musica Sacra/Kent Tritle and his Kennedy Center Debut with the National Symphony conducted by Matthew Halls. Mr. Carter is in demand as a guest lecturer on countertenor technique and repertory, frequently offering interactive lecture-recitals and master classes. He received a Master of Music degree from Yale School of Music and Institute of Sacred Music, where he studied with James Taylor, Simon Carrington, and Judith Malafonte. He received his undergraduate degree from William Jewell College, where he studied voice with Arnold Epley. Mr. Carter was a 2008 regional finalist in the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions. He lives in Liberty, Missouri, with his wife and two children, and serves as artist-in-residence at William Jewell College.
Baritone Philip Cutlip has garnered critical acclaim for his performances across North America and Europe. Established on both concert and opera stages, he has performed with a distinguished list of conductors including Nicholas McGegan, Yves Abel, Miguel Harth-Bedoya, Gerard Schwarz, and Donald Runnicles. A distinctive element in Mr. Cutlip’s career is his ongoing collaboration with established dance companies and avant-garde ensembles, starting with the New York City Ballet to perform songs by Charles Ives. Frequently heard in the New York Festival of Song, Mr. Cutlip gave the world première of American Love Songs, a set of ten commissioned pieces for vocal quartet, at the Tisch Center for the Arts and at the 92nd Street Y. His appearance as Joseph de Rocher in Heggie’s Dead Man Walking, with Joyce DiDonato and Frederica von Stade for Houston Grand Opera, has been released on Virgin Records.

Critically acclaimed for its brilliant sound, robust energy, and sensitive delivery of text, the Philharmonia Chorale was formed in 1995 to provide a vocal complement whose fluency in the stylistic language of the Baroque period matched that of Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra. The 24 members of the Chorale are professional singers with distinguished solo and ensemble experience with organizations, including the San Francisco Symphony, Carmel Bach Festival, and American Bach Soloists. They appear in roles with regional opera companies and have been members and founders of some of the country’s premier vocal ensembles, including Chanticleer, the Dale Warland Singers, and Theatre of Voices. The Chorale appears on the Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra recordings of Arne’s Alfred, Alessandro Scarlatti’s Cecilian Vespers, and Beethoven’s Symphony No. 9.

Bruce Lamott has been director of the Philharmonia Chorale for more than a decade. He first performed with Philharmonia Baroque in 1989 as continuo harpsichordist for Handel’s Giustino.

Dr. Lamott was previously the director of choruses and conductor of the Mission Candlelight Concerts at the Carmel Bach Festival, where his 30-year tenure included performing as a harpsichordist and presenting as a lecturer and education director. In eight seasons as choral director and assistant conductor of the Sacramento Symphony, he conducted annual choral concerts of major works, including both Bach Passion settings and Haydn’s The Seasons, as well as preparing the chorus for most of the standard symphonic choral repertoire.

Dr. Lamott received a bachelor’s degree from Lewis and Clark College and an M.A. and Ph.D. in musicology from Stanford University, where he researched the keyboard improvisation practices of the Baroque period. He joined the musicology faculty at UC Davis, where he directed the Early Music Ensemble. He currently resides in San Francisco, where he teaches choral music and music history at San Francisco University High School, and is a part-time professor of music history at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music.

Among his other music-related activities, Dr. Lamott teaches continuo realization in the Merola Program of the San Francisco Opera and lectures for the San Francisco Opera Guild.