Berkeley, March 25, 2021 — Cal Performances at UC Berkeley presents Jazzmeia Horn in a virtual performance debuting with an interactive digital watch party on Thursday, April 22 at 7pm (PDT). Award-winning jazz vocalist Horn's debut album, A Social Call, landed in Billboard's jazz Top 10, and her follow-up release, Love and Liberation, was nominated for a 2020 Grammy. Following its debut, Jazzmeia Horn's performance will be available for viewing on demand through July 21, 2021. The performance is one of 12 newly produced, full-length performances in the Spring 2021 Cal Performances at Home performing arts streaming series, a continuation of the ambitious series launched in fall 2020. Filmed on stages all over the world—in renowned venues and recording studios in the locations where the artists are sheltering in place—all artists currently planned for the spring series were originally booked to perform in person at UC Berkeley as part of Cal Performances' 2020–21 live season, which was cancelled due to the coronavirus pandemic. The debut of each Spring performance, on select Thursday evenings through June 10, 2021, will be celebrated with a digital watch party accompanied by participatory live chat. Every performance (except where noted) will be viewable on demand for three months following its debut. A complete list of all Cal Performances at Home performances currently available can be found at calperformances.org/buy. The performances will be supplemented with free artist talks, interviews, lectures, and panel discussions shared on the Beyond the Stage web page at calperformances.org/learn/beyond-the-stage.

WHO Jazzmeia Horn took first place in the 2013 Sarah Vaughan International Jazz Vocal Competition and then won the 2015 Thelonious Monk Institute International Jazz Competition, the highest accolade available to a young jazz musician. Horn's 2017 debut album, A Social Call, landed in Billboard's jazz Top 10. Her follow-up release, Love and Liberation, was nominated for a 2020 Grammy and features original compositions and standards from the Great American Songbook, traditional spirituals, and modern R&B.
